During the period from 17 to 30 June 1953, USIG in East Berlin continued working as previously. The production plans of the plants of the SAGs were not modified. It became known, however, that conferences took place at the respective ministries in East Germany to determine the changes in plans, which had been announced in public. Source stated that although the SAGs were not controlled by these ministries, their supply would be considerably affected by the decisions of the ministries.
